Teaching administration and Pastoral care experience

I have teaching administration experience as member of the teaching committee, the exam and admissions boards of the MSc, Migration Studies, University of Oxford. I have been the assessor of all the above-mentioned courses I taught.

I have provided pastoral care to students in the context of my role as a College advisor at St Antony's College, as a member of the teaching committee of the MSc in migration Studies and in my capacity as a graduate student supervisor over several years.

Research Impact/ Public Engagement

- The policy recommendations deriving from my Marie S. Curie project EUMIGRE drafted together with Professor Lois Labrianidis (see book chapter publication 'Crisis Brain Drain') informed Greek State policy on diaspora engagement and set the parameters for the establishment of the 'knowledge of bridges' policy initiative (<https://www.knowledgebridges.gr/>).
- The findings of the SEESOX survey on the Greeks in the UK, of which I was the principal investigator, informed the Greek parliamentary debate on the facilitation of the vote for non-resident Greeks.
- I was invited by the Athens International Airport as an expert on the new Greek diaspora to guide their research team in analyzing the data collected at the airport on the traveling behavior of Greeks living in and outside Greece.
- I have been interviewed on my work on the new Greek emigration by several Greek national newspapers and the Financial Times as well as by several national radio and TV stations in Greece.
