PUBLICATIONS*Brief description of published work

Most publications comprised in the field of Urban Social Geography. They were produced since the mid 1980s; in terms of theory they draw insight from diverse sources like the French nouvelle sociologie urbaine – especially concerning issues related to collective consumption

(Castells, Lojkin etc.)– while the more recent are part of the critical discussion of dominant theoretical claims regarding social polarization and socially divided cities within capitalist globalization (Friedman, Sassen etc.). At the same time, they discuss the importance of contextual differences in relation to varieties of capitalism (e.g. Esping-Andersen’s theoretical elaborations on different regimes of welfare capitalism and their social impact) but also in terms of different historical paths of urbanization. These theoretical concerns have contributed to formulating research questions and to carrying-out projects focused on Greek urban space and, in particular, on the socio-spatial changes in the Athenian metropolis. An important feature of this work is the often uneasy articulation between concepts and theories generated in core contexts due to their interpretative limits when applied to different contexts –like Southern Europe. The constant exploration of these limits, eventually, leads to unveiling the contextual limits of concepts and theories presumed universal.

The largest part of empirical investigations comprised in this work is devoted to the analysis of social structures and inequalities and their dynamic change within the Greek urbanization process in the post-war period and its aftermath. Its main contribution is to have pinpointed and analyzed the different patterns and processes of residential segregation in Athens and the ways they are intertwined with broader socioeconomic and political processes.

Another feature of this body of work is the extensive use of statistical and mapping techniques and the analyses of large data sets (censuses and large surveys) that have permitted to depict a very detailed image of the aforementioned processes in the metropolitan space of the Greek capital. Moreover, two software applications (database and mapping) have been produced to facilitate the task of socio-spatial analysis and were made available for use by a broad body of PhD students and researchers and, recently, by the broader public through free internet access.

The publications –subsequently listed in detail– are summarily presented in the following table:

Citations

Citations by third parties amount to 1.300 approximately. 1.118 can be traced in Anglophone sources (<https://scholar.google.com/citations?user=M9UqB2kAAAAJ&hl=en>) (including self-citations) while the rest is an estimate based on non-systematic searches in the Greek and French relevant bibliography.

Indicatively, through google scholar 286 citations can be found for book I.i.2; 90 for article II.23; 95 for article II.16; 62 for article II.22; 50 for edited book I.ii.5; 47 for article II.27; 46 for article II.9; 36 for article II.17; 35 for article II.25; 26 for book I.i.1; 29 for article II.18; 25 for chapter III.33; 18 for edited book I.ii.10; 20 for edited book I.ii.3 etc. A relatively thorough –but quite old (1999)– inquiry in the Greek bibliography revealed approximately 200 citations: 49 for edited book I.ii.13; 28 for book I.i.1; 12 for article II.33; 11 for article II.36 etc.
